

NARWHAL

The Narwhal is comfortable, stable and easy to paddle. Its length and volume provide the storage space to meet the needs of most Sea kayakers. A spacious cockpit affords ample room for the legs and feet. With its flared hull, the Narwhal offers stability in waves without noticeably impeding cruising speed, a factor sure to instil confidence in novice paddlers.

The narwhal is a small whale related to the beluga. It lives in the Arctic Ocean and is nicknamed the "unicorn of the sea" because the male sports a spiral-shaped ivory tusk growing out of the upper jaw.
